Murderer of St. Paul Clergyman Identified as Claimant in Actions Against Him.

ST. PAUL, Minn, March 5.—Mrs. Agnes Dudske who last night shot and killed the Rev. Heaby Jajisky, pastor of a Polish Catholic church, while he was hearing the confessional, has been identified as the claimant in three suits against the priest.

priest.

In the suits it is alleged that Father Jajisky is the father of the claimant's baby, born in 1915.

The jury disagreed in two of these suits and acquitted the priest in the third.

The woman came here from Minneapolis, the police say. Parishioners of the dead priest claim that she has never worshiped at his church,
and that she is a stranger to the congregation.
Father Jajisky came here from Minneapolis following a factional church fight there, in which he was when the woman entered the church she pretended to be a worshiper in the confessional. As she knelt in a pew she appeared to make the usual preparations to participate in the service.

There were only a few persons in the church at the time, including two boys and a young man and several pure said a young man and several pure. and a young man, and seevral nuns. One of the boys had just completed confession, when the stranger stepped concession, when the stranger stepped up in her turn.

The story of those who witnessed the shooting was interpreted by Polish members of the church for the police. Just after kneeling before Father Jajisky, the parishioners say, the woman whipped out a revolve and shot five times.

woman whipped out a revolve and shot five times.

The priest died within a few minutes, his left eye being blown out by the bullet that caused his death.

The confessional at which the shooting occurred was open, consisting only of a kneeling bench, in front of the church.

of a kneeling bench, in front of the church.

The police at first were of the opinion that the priest's death might have resulted from an anarchist plot.

Immediately following the shooting the woman walked caimly to the altar and was kneeling there when parishioners came to her. She turned toward them, saying quietly that she had killed the priest, and pointing so where the gun lay on the floor, declaring that it was the weapon she had used.

Mrs. Dudske was held by the parishoners until the police arived. She was then placed under arrest and taken to the Central police station.

There she was identified as the

There she was identified as the claimant in three suits against the priest. In each suit she sought civil damages and money for the support of the child. All the suits were filed in 1913.

The priest's defense in each case was that he was the victim of a frame-up, growing out of a factional fight at Hody Crees Church, Minneapolis, He was transferred to St. Paul following the suits:
